

Dear Readers,

I have the pleasure of announcing the relaunch of the newsletter of the Embassy of Afghanistan in Oslo. The newsletter will be one among the various tools through which we will keep the public informed and engaged in Embassy's activities. Afghanistan and Norway have, for close to six decades, enjoyed friendly and cordial relations. In recent years, the bilateral relationship between our two countries has grown closer and deeper and Norway's dedicated support of our national efforts have helped lay the foundation for a more prosperous society. Norway remains a key and trusted partner of Afghanistan and an important contributor in security, development, human rights and other fields. Since the beginning of my tenure as Ambassador to Oslo in November 2019, my colleagues at the Embassy and I have had the pleasure of working to set a new foundation to further enhance the scope and level of Afghanistan-Norway relations and cooperation. As part of this objective, we have been engaged in a number of initiatives. The same applies to our relations and cooperation with our other partners Denmark and Iceland, where this embassy is accredited with non-resident status. In this regard, the monthly newsletter will primarily cover activities across the areas of public, peace, economic and cultural diplomacy, as well as our work in relation to security and defense cooperation, migration and the Afghan diaspora. Furthermore, Oslo is home to a large diplomatic milieu. We interact closely with other embassies, an important work that will also be featured in our monthly publication. This edition of this newsletter captures some of the Embassy's activities since the start of my tenure as Ambassador to Norway in November 2019. We invite you to follow our newsletter and other social media outlets, including the Embassy's twitter account and website to stay informed of our activities.
